Is clutter taking over your life? If so, there are many ways to declutter your home with the help of technology.

Getting rid of physical items that are piling up on your kitchen counter can actually save you money – and of course space. Read these 4 tips to clear your clutter.

Switch to eStatements

Is that stack of annoying mail growing each day? It's time to go paperless! This space saving service organizes 18 months of bank statement history for you, for free. You can even view your statements anytime, anywhere. Not only will eStatements save you time, space, and money, it's environmentally friendly and safer than regular statements.

Stream Your Movies

Is your entertainment center getting crowded from the amount of DVDs? Did you know the average cost of a DVD ranges from $10-$15, and if it's a new release it can go as high as $30? Instead, subscribe to a movie streaming service: Netflix, Hulu, etc. Steaming services on average cost $8 a month. You will save money and space!

Use an App, Not the Scissors

Drop the newspaper and scissors, and grab your phone. There are a variety of apps that provide coupons for consumers, you can even search for your favorite store. Instead of gathering your unused coupons lying around the house when the expiration date ends, simply login to your app and delete them with a swipe of a finger.

Reuse. Reduce. Recycle.

Are plastic and paper grocery bags flooding your home? Instead of letting them pile up, or throwing them away each time you grocery shop, purchase a couple reusable grocery bags at your local supermarket. There are stores that charge you each time you use a take a plastic or paper grocery bag. These ecofriendly bags will save you time and money.
