Let's Talk About Identity Theft SNBT to Hold Identity Theft Discussion

More than 15.4 million Americans were victims of identity fraud in 2016, according to Javelin Strategy & Research. The Stephenson National Bank & Trust (SNBT) understands the need for education on this issue, which is why the bank will host six Let's Talk About Identity Theft discussions.

SNBT employees, Jeff Myster and Melissa Mathews, will have open conversations to help consumers avoid and address potential identity theft issues. This program is free and open to the public. Topics will include nationwide statistics, prevention tips, how to use fraud alerts, and concerns that attendees may have.

"Identity theft continues to be a major issue for consumers," said Jeff Myster, SNBT SVP of Retail Banking. "It is important that we spread the word that there are ways consumers can protect themselves from fraud."

Make plans to attend one of the three sessions open to the public:

- Pembine at N18630 Highway 141 on Monday, November 27 from 4:00 to 5pm
- Wausaukee at 704 Main Street on Tuesday, November 28 from 4:00 to 5pm
- Crivitz at 606 Henriette Ave on Wednesday, November 29 from 4:00 to 5pm
- Oconto at 101 Bralick Way on Thursday, November 30 from 4:00 to 5pm
- Menominee at 1111 10th Street on Wednesday, December 6 from 4:00 to 5pm
- Marinette at 1820 Hall Avenue on Thursday, December 7 from 4:00 to 5pm

If a person has questions about identity theft, they can visit the Consumer Alerts page on SNBT's website www.snbt.com for tips and information.
